QUICK SDQL OVERVIEW

SDQL stands for Sports Data Query Language. It is a text language that allows the investigation of past sports results over the internet using your home computer. It is easy, it is fast and it is free. If you can perform a search on Google, you can query the past results of professional sports games.

Like the Google search, there is a text query box in which you enter what you would like to search. Unlike Google, the search has to be specific and you must use the Sports Data Query Language. The advantage of the SDQL is that you get one hit, which is exactly what you asked for – not a billion hits, most of which are not what you are looking for.

For example, if you want to see the results for all road favorites in the NBA since 1995-96 (the start of the database), simply enter: into the query text box and then click on the query button. It is as simple as that! The premier site at which to perform your own queries is:

killersports.com/nba.py/query

To see all the NBA games in which a team shot less than 40% from the field and won the game, enter

```
FGP < 40 and W

That's it!

The SDQL allows access to billions of situations that are of interest to sports historians, the sports media, fantasy league participants and serious sports bettors.

The ability to quickly and efficiently interrogate historical data in the NBA (as well as the NFL, NHL, MLB and NCAA football and basketball) will provide the SDQL user a terrific advantage over those that just pore over box scores and read other people's interpretations of the results. Perhaps the best way to grasp the SDQL is to simply try the hundreds of examples in the trends section of book using query page.

Basically, there are only a couple of key ideas that will get you well on your way to becoming an SDQL master. The first is that the SDQL is NOT a computer language that requires knowledge of how to program a computer. The SDQL is as simple as it can possibly be. Of course, the SDQL can be a big complex if the situation you want to query is complex.

Basically, a query consists of a number of conditions separated by the word "and." For example,

```
team = Bucks and A and streak >= 3

This query has three conditions. The first is that the team is the Milwaukee Bucks. The second is that the site is away. That is, they are not playing at home. The third is that they are on a three-plus game winning streak.

There is no limit to the number of SDQL phrases that can be strung together with the word "and."

That's it. This is the basic structure of the SDQL. This structure will allow the thorough interrogation and investigation of historical sports data. Understanding this structure is the key to understanding the SDQL. Once you have a grasp of this structure, you will be able to perform your own investigations.

Start by trying the many examples in this book that can be found on the Team Trends pages. You can also learn about the SDQL by watching the daily videos posted on youtube.com and tweeted out by KillerSports.

If you have any questions about the SDQL, no matter how trivial, please post them on Twitter with the #SDQL hashtag. If you would like a response, ask a specific, well written question.

Your post will be seen by numerous SDQL users who will be able to be able to address all your well-posed questions.

Happy Hunting!

The SDQG NBA Trend Set

The SDQG (Sports Data Query Group) NBA Trend set contains a wealth of past performance indicators that have been uncovered with the Sports Data Query Language (SDQL). The vast majority of these performance indicators are not factored into the line, thus giving the knowledgeable, intelligent handicapper an advantage over the linesmaker.

The value of this trend set comes from the fact that it is updated daily during the season by a team of NBA experts who have learned how to interrogate the database with the SDQL. This will allow the user of this trend set to capitalize on emerging trends in performance before the linesmakers. Here is a sample of one of the trends in the set:

NBA2134: Play AGAINST the Cavaliers as a favorite after a game in which Lebron James was not the high scorer.

The SDQL text is:

team=Cavaliers and F and Lebron
James:p:points<max:p:points and season =
2017
```

Here is the records summary it produces:

```
SU: 6-11 (-7.88, 35.3%)
ATS: 0-17-0 (-14.76, 0.0%) avg line: -6.9
O/U: 8-8-1 (3.06, 50.0%) avg total: 214.8

So, last season, the Cavaliers were 0-17 ATS as a favorite off any game in which Lebron James was not their high scorer. Cleveland was outscored by an average of 7.88 ppg in this spot despite being favored by an average of 6.9 ppg. This trend appeared in the SDQG active listing starting when it was 0-6 ATS. That is a lot of winners.

Of course, Lebron is now on the Lakers and it will be interesting to see what performance indicators develop as a result. You can be confident that the Sports Data Query Group will be the first to identify them. The SDQG pores over the best performance indicators uncovered by the supercomputers running over 500,000,000 million handicapping situations every night from about 2:00 am to 5:00 am Eastern time.

The knowledgeable handicapper will not just look at the record of the trend to make a handicapping decision. The knowledgeable handicapper will click through to the stats summary and game listing to examine the average margin and the timeliness of the performance indicator. After all, the trends in performance are not where the handicapping ends, it is where it begins.

Imagine starting your daily handicapping with the top performance indicators for every match-up on the card. It is only $7 in web debit value a day, $27 for a week, $77 for 30 days and $277 for the season, including playoffs.

Of course, you are welcome to save any of the trends in the SDQG set in your personal trend file.

Each day there will be a sample performance indicator from the SDQG set presented in a one-minute video. The video link will be tweeted out under the twitter handle:

Follow and don't miss a single NBA performance indicator this season!

At SportsBook Breakers, we have been looking at how various statistics and usage rates impact performance. From a gambling standpoint, we generally look at how a team performs in the upcoming game, using the previous games or a handful of previous games data. While there is some value to this for NBA teams, during this last decade there has been an unbelievable amount of untapped data that NBA teams have started to take advantage of for in-game performance. The simplest concept of these efforts starts with this – scoring three points in a possession is better than scoring two points. When that can be done at an efficient enough rate – which it often can be – it gives the three-point shooting team a significant edge. This sounds like the most basic of concepts right now, but just five years ago that was not widely understood. The three-point shooting renaissance is upon us.

Now back to what we do best – looking at how a previous games’ performance affects the next game. We want to examine how three-point shooting in one game impacts how a team performs in the next game. To do this, we will start with the most basic of parameters, how many three pointers a team attempted in their last game.

The powerful database at Killersports.com makes this search a breeze. Using the open-ended Sports Data Query Language (SDQL) text “p:three pointers attempted” we see the entire league performance sorted by how many three pointers they attempted in their past game. In that SDQL text, the “three pointers attempted” pulls the parameter we want to examine and the “p:” prefix signifies the previous game (which is the necessary parameter to look at the performance next game).

The results, found in the chart below, go back to the start of the Killersports.com NBA Database in the 1995-96 season.

42	22-23-1 (-0.80, 48.9%)	21-25 (-0.67, 45.7%)	46	-0.1
43	25-17-0 (-0.05, 59.5%)	24-18 (3.52, 57.1%)	42	-3.6
>=44	71-62-4 (-0.11, 53.4%)	86-51 (3.90, 62.8%)	137	-4.0

Let us start by stating what should be obvious. That shooting three-pointers is good for an NBA team and people realize it. When a team has taken at least 30 three-pointers in a game, they are favored on average in the next game at every single number of three-pointers attempted that is included in the chart. In fact, this is true all the way down to 20+ three-pointers attempted in the last game. The straight up records correlate with this as well. Teams that shot 30+ three pointers last game are 2293-1972 (53.8%) overall. Teams that shot more than 35 three pointers last game are 614-442 SU (58.1%). That is the equivalent of a 47.6-win team based on this one stat alone that does not look directly at any same-game stat.

Of course we are more interested in the against the spread performance and looking at that column of the chart, there are promising results as well, despite these teams being favored on average. The teams that shot more than 35 three pointers last game are 513-421-19 ATS (54.9%) when facing a team that shot no more than 35 pointers last game, eliminating any double actives (SDQL: p:three pointers attempted>35 and op:three pointers attempted<=35). The results when looking at teams that shot more than 40 three pointers last game (SDQL: p:three pointers attempted>40 and op:three pointers attempted<=40) are even stronger at 157-119-7 ATS, covering in 56.9% of games.

There are a couple of other factors we want to examine related to this seemingly profitable system. To start with, we want to look at performance by season, because as we antidotally noted in the opening, three-point shooting has seen a major uptick in recent years. To look at how that has impacted the number of active instances, as well as to see if advanced knowledge of the importance of three pointers has caught up to this system, we look at the season by season results, using the SDQL: p:three pointers attempted>40 and op:three pointers attempted<=40 and season

SportsBook Breakers is an expert at system handicapping and it has shown in the quality of its selections. SportsBook Breakers (Vince Akins) has had massive success in football, as the #1 NCAA handicapper in the country in 2017 as graded by Vegas Insider and Sports Watch Monitor, and as one of the top NFL handicappers in the country.

Using 100s of NBA systems, including dozens of newly discovered systems heading into the 2018-19 season, SBB is poised for a huge NBA season.

SBB's plays will be available this season at killercappers.com.

Obviously, we knew three-point shooting was up, but to see that fact laid out in this fashion is still eye opening. Between 1996-97 and 2001-02, no team shot more than 40 three-pointers in a single game. In fact, between 1995-96 and 2010-11, this system was active a total of 16 times. Last season alone, the system was active 116 times on 18 different teams. The good news is, the successful performance has not changed as information has caught up, as these teams have covered in 56.8% and 56.9% of active instances the past two years.

There are several other factors that can be examined related to this study, but an obvious one we feel would be negligent to not consider is the success of that three-point shooting in the previous game. Does it matter if a team shot so many three pointers if they do not do so successfully? To query this, we will use a few SDQL searches to group the possible scenarios, as using a simple open-end query with "TPP" as the added parameter using the short cut for three-point percentages is not easy to navigate with three point percentages calculated to several decimal points. The results of grouping the shooting percentages of the performance of these teams that shot more than 40 threes last game based on their shooting percentage is below.

Previous Three-Point Percentage	ATS	SU	# of Games	Average Line
<30	34-22-1 (2.08, 60.7%)	36-21 (3.65, 63.2%)	57	-1.6
30-35	38-31-1 (1.09, 55.1%)	44-26 (3.70, 62.9%)	70	-2.6
35-40	37-31-2 (0.27, 54.4%)	43-27 (3.79, 61.4%)	70	-3.5
>=40	48-35-3 (0.16, 57.8%)	48-38 (2.87, 55.8%)	86	-2.7

Looking at the results, the quality of these teams three-point shooting in their last game has very little impact. The lines shift slightly higher in these games when a team was hot with their shooting in the game, but the against the spread results are solid at every level.

Finally, let us take a quick look at how teams have gotten to improved performance in these games. To do this, we are only going to look at results from the past two years because of how many of the active instances came in the past two years. Doing so will give us an accurate baseline of how the average teams performed during this time period. Over the past two seasons, the average team scored 105.9 points per game, making 10.1 three pointers per game while shooting 36.0% from long range. The teams coming off games where they shot more than 40 threes last game and their opponent did not shot at a slightly better 36.8% clip on threes in these games. The big difference however, is that these teams made 13.5 threes in these games due too a significantly higher quantity of attempts. This led to an average points scored of 110.3 per game, a significant jump that accounts for an average margin of +3.3 points in these games.

Summary:

Teams that understand efficiency carry a slight edge and maximizing three-point shooting is a huge aspect of that. It is beneficial to play on a team that was willing to take a huge quantity of three-pointers in their last game.

PLAY ON: Teams that shot more than 40 three pointers in their last game.

NBA, HOME FAVORITES, AND THE REST FACTOR:

By Mr East

The NBA season is right around the corner, and bettors will soon take their fresh bank rolls in hopes for a successful bout against the odds-makers. It is never a gentle task to take down "the man", as it takes discipline, bankroll management, selectivity, and patience. It also takes a proven edge, and not an edge based on what happened last game, the pitfall of many gamblers.

Bettors come disguised in many ways. There are the so-called recreational bettors that just enjoy having a few shekels on a game they can watch to add some excitement, the do-it-yourself handicapper's that have "dangerous" knowledge, and when I say dangerous, more often than not, dangerous to themselves. We also have the reckless gamblers that will bet anything, anywhere, any time. There is also the "investor," that will methodically play the edges only, perhaps hire a true professional, to assist, much like a stockbroker. Regardless of where you fit in, here is some studied, learned, and valuable information, to arm you with going forward.

My "bulls eye" in sports investing revolves around NBA totals, since 2008, I am a 57% NBA totals handicapper, and since that record has been achieved on 1000s of games, I consider myself a very credible source on this topic.

The rest factor and NBA totals, I have deeply researched, and here is a golden nugget from that research. NBA teams are known for showing up one night, and not the next. Defense, a great deal of the time, is just a rumor in the NBA. The question is, how do you predict, when a team is going to play both ends of the court? My research has that answer. Almost 80% of all NBA games bring both teams into the game on 2 days rest or less, so if we focus in that fact, here is a matrix of NBA total results, in those games:

Home rest	Road rest	UNDER %
0	0	.525*
1	1	.498
2	2	.482
0	1	.495
0	2	.500
1	0	.479
2	0	.509

*blindly profitable

There have been over 1500 NBA games represented by both teams playing on 0 rest, and it nulls the hypothesis of a fair bet. It is quite apparent, we have a significant "unfair" coin and a sample size of over 1500 games. It is quite apparent, that the extra energy required to play both ends of the floor, is impaired by the lack of rest.

The next step is to dig deeper, and find out, what type of team is impacted in a greater way, and has the odds-maker compensated properly for it. The data suggests the less quality to a team, the greater the impacts. Poor teams suffer tremendously on defense with no rest, so a pair if bad teams (.400 or less), should feel the greatest impact. We can show this with the following SDQL,

HF and rest = 0 and o:rest = 0 and WP <= 40 and o:WP <= 40

This SDQL translates to:

Home favorites when both teams are on no rest and both have a winning percentage of .400 or less:

SU: 122-66 (4.40, 64.9%)
ATS: 93-89-6 (-1.07, 51.1%) avg line: -5.5
O/U: 119-62-7 (5.67, 65.7%) avg total: 195.9

Here we see the results at 65.7% of the time the game plays OVER the total, and beats the spread by an average of +5.67 points a game. This pretty much concludes the premise.

So, why just teams .400 or worse? When you have bad teams, they are bad because they do not have the starting talent, or the depth of better teams. This can be illustrated by the fact, if you look at all teams in 5% increments, ie. .450 v .450, .500 v .500, .550 v .550, etc. Each stage of winning in consecutive order, returns worse results. The better the teams, the less edge there is, and the optimal edge is .400 or worse vs .400 or worse, as illustrated above.

Last is to eliminate the familiarity bias. teams from the same division play each other more than they play all the other teams, year after year. It tends to eliminate the edge as you can see division game results are:

SU: 23-15 (3.74, 60.5%)
ATS: 19-19-0 (-1.63, 50.0%) avg line: -5.4
O/U: 19-18-1 (4.41, 51.4%) avg total: 195.3
by using this SDQL:

HF and rest = 0 and o:rest = 0 and WP <= 40 and o:WP <= 40 and division = o:division

As you can see there is no edge here, so what remains is off-the-charts predictive, eliminating division games:

HF and rest = 0 and o:rest = 0 and WP <= 40 and o:WP <= 40 and division != o:division

SU: 99-51 (4.57, 66.0%)
ATS: 74-70-6 (-0.93, 51.4%) avg line: -5.5
O/U: 100-44-6 (5.99, 69.4%) avg total: 196.1

A stunning 69.4% of these games play over the total, and just 2 of the last 23 seasons have failed to produce at least 50% winners!
