THE REVENGE COMPONENT: NOT WHAT YOU THINK:

By Mr East

One of the most sought after and trusted angles utilized by sports bettors revolves around the revenge angle. Many seek out a team playing with revenge because it seems to be conceptually correct. All the games played in the NBA show 50.6% of them cover, which is within the statistical expectation. That tends to point out the fact that revenge, in and of itself, is not a very predictive measure to blindly make a play.

My intuitive nature as a handicapper has led me to seek out the opposite of where most bettors tend to go and play into a revenging team as opposed to on them. Let's take a look at one such example that checks all the boxes, and has well over 100 games in the dataset to offer the fact that the chances it is just variance are greatly reduced.

What I like to do is play against a revenging home dog, if they are off a home win of three points or fewer (or a one-possession game). This means the now revenging team spent a lot of physical and emotional energy in their previous game, and may not be up to task mentally, physically, or emotionally for their next game, revenge or not. This is especially true if they are a bad team with a winning percentage from greater than .170 but less than .470, and the line is greater than +2 (A true home dog). Putting all things together looks like this:

- 1) Home dog of greater than +2 with revenge
- 2) Off a home win of three or fewer points
- 3) Winning percentage greater than .170 but less than .470:

The SDQL text is:

HD and P:L and p:HW and p:margin < 4 and WP > 17 and WP < 47 and line > 2

The results are:

SU: 28-117 (-9.45, 19.3%)
ATS: 44-101-0 (-3.66, 30.3%) avg line:+ 5.8

These teams as you can see are brutally bad! They cover just 30.3% of the time, so going into the teeth of revenge generates a 70% success rate. So much for revenge.

My NBA totals were 122-91 ATS (57.3%) last year and 728-537 ATS (57.5%) since 2008! This long-term success is unmatched by any other handicapper in the industry.

Best of Luck,
East

2019-20 Rest vs No Rest Combinations

By the Sports Data Query Group (SDQG)

In this article we will look at the games that feature a “Rest vs No Rest” combination. The table these data for the 2019-20 NBA regular season. The first column gives the team name. The second column give the number of scheduled games in which the team has rest and their opponent has no rest. The SDQL text for this situation is simply:

rest > 0 and o:rest = 0

The third column gives the number of games the team has no rest and their opponent is rested. The SDQL here is:

rest = 0 and o:rest > 0

The fourth column gives the differential between column two and column three. Positive differentials are favorable and negative differentials are unfavorable.

At the top of the Rest vs No Rest scheduling bonanza we find the New York Knicks, which play 16 games this regular season with rest vs an unrested opponent. They are followed by the Phoenix Suns with 14 and the Jazz, Bucks and Clippers with 12 each.

On the other end of the spectrum, we have the Orlando Magic, which only play five games all season with rest vs an unrested opponent. That is quite a difference from top to bottom.

In the third column, we find that the Cavaliers and Suns each play 13 games this season with no rest vs a rested opponent while the Wizards and Hawks each get 12.

The Chicago Bulls made out well in this category, as they play only FIVE games all season in which they have no rest and their opponent is rested.

The last column gives the difference between columns 2 and 3. The Knicks and the Bulls share the best differential at positive 6 and the Magic and Wizards share the worst differential at minus 5.

Of course, there is a lot more analysis needed to determine the difficulty of a team’s schedule, but the rest-vs-no rest combinations are definitely a piece of the puzzle.

At SportsBook Breakers, we are always looking at how various statistics and usage rates impact performance. When including 2 more statistics in a single system, we want to make sure they have some impact on each other in the course of the game (this is actually true when including any parameter, but parameters such as win vs loss, line, total, ATS margin, OU margin etc. are inevitably linked in some way to every statistic from a given game).

The two statistics we want to compare here are assists and turnovers. These two statistics are linked together in the game of basketball perhaps as much as any two statistics where one is not a direct causation of the other (ie: how field goal percentage directly causes points scored). How aggressively a team moves the ball and the pace they play with both greatly increase the likelihood of both assists and turnovers. For instance, a team that is playing almost all isolation ball will have low assists and turnover numbers. A team that is really pushing the pace and being aggressive with ball movement is likely to have high assists and high turnover numbers. And a variety of factors, including the quality of the team's play, can lead to situations where one of those numbers is high and the other is low.

So here we get to do what we do best – looking at how a previous games' performance affects the next game. In many of our systems (the best of which will be made available throughout the season on the Killersports.com Trends Mart) we look at several games stretches or data or even how it compares to season-long performance. But for this exercise, we are going to keep things simpler, and look at how assists and turnovers from the previous game affect the current game performance.

We suspect that the most powerful data points are going to come when comparing the two data points together, but to get a baseline, we are going to start with showing the results of each individually.

The powerful database at Killersports.com makes this search a breeze. Using the open-ended Sports Data Query Language (SDQL) text "p:assists" and well as "p:turnovers" we see the entire league performance sorted each of these categories individually in their past game. In that SDQL text, the "assists" pulls the parameter we want to examine and the "p:" prefix signifies the previous game (which is the necessary parameter to look at the performance next game).

The results, found in the charts below, go back to the start of the Killersports.com NBA Database in the 1995-96 season.

SportsBook Breakers Systems on the Killersports.com Trend Mart

These NBA systems are just a few of hundreds of NBA and NCAA Basketball systems SBB has at its disposal when handicapping each day. This season on the Killersports.com Trends Mart, SBB will be publishing the very best of those systems along with the type of quality analysis you see in this study.

Let's assess what we can take from these two charts. The first is that each category does have an affect on the next game. That is important to establish as it shows last games assists and turnover performance were not just random and do carry meaningful information going forward. When a team tallied 30+ assists last game, they are favored by -2.1 on average and win outright 56.5% of the time. Push that number to 35+ assists and they are favored by -2.6 points on average win outright 57.3% of the time. When the number was 15 or fewer last game, the average line is +1.0 and teams win outright just 46.8% of games.

We see similar data looking at the turnover chart, though to lesser extremes. When a team had seven or fewer turnovers last game, the average line is -0.6 points and they win outright 53.4% of games. When a team committed 22+ turnovers last game, the average line is +1.4 and they win outright just 46.1% of games.

None of this is actionable yet from a betting perspective as the results are accurately baked into the lines. However, at the very extremely of successful play, we do see some positive ATS results. When a team tallied 39+ assists last game, they are 61-45-1 (1.37, 57.5%) ATS. When a team committed four or fewer turnovers last game they are 89-69-2 (0.79, 56.3%) ATS. This data is both interesting in and of itself and in the context of the rest of this stuff. (Note: There is no comparable ATS result on the poor play side of both parameters).

The other thing these charts allowed up to do is establish criteria for the amount of games and assists/turnovers to use as the extremes in each of these categories, so we can group together results for comparison. For this, we want to group the data into the top and bottom 1, 5, 10, 20 and 50% of results for both assists and turnovers in the previous game, rounding to the nearest number. Here are those results for each category:

ASSISTS:

Top 1%: >=35	Top 5%: >=31	Top 10% >=29	Top 20%: >=27	Top 50%: >=22
Bottom 50%: <=21	Bottom 20%: <=17	Bottom 10%:<=15	Bottom 5%: <=13	Bottom 1%:<=10

PREVIOUS TURNOVERS:

Top 1%: <=5	Top 5%: <=7	Top 10%: <=9	Top 20%: <=10	Top 50%: <=13
Bottom 50%: >=14	Bottom 20%: >=18	Bottom 10%: >=20	Bottom 5%: >=21	Bottom 1%: >=25

With this data now in hand we are going to look at performance on the extreme of each end of one parameter, compared to the various data points of the other parameter. The SDQL makes this extremely simple using the grouping feature. By running the four queries below, you can see the results of every single data point for the top and bottom 1, 5, 10, 20 and 50% result in previous games assists and turnover results in the previous game:

In the interest of space, we are unable to include every single one of these data points in a chart in this article (but you can verify and examine the results yourself by running these queries and Killersports.com!). Below will summarize the results of each below:

p:assists>=22,27,29,31,35 and p:turnovers<=13, 10,9,7,5 p:assists>=22,27,29,31,35 and p:turnovers>=25,21,20,18,14

p:assists<=21,17,15,13,10 and p:turnovers>=25,21,20,18,14

p:assists<=21,17,15,13,10 and p:turnovers<=13, 10,9,7,5

HIGH ASSISTS/LOW TURNOVERS: (p:assists>=22,27,29,31,35 and p:turnovers<=13, 10,9,7,5):

This is the most advantageous result for the previous game and that carryover to this next game has some exciting results even with teams being favored on average in every spot. Almost all of these data points are above 50% ATS, and the only result to fall more than a percentage point below 50% are games where the previous assist rate was top 1% and the previous turnover rate was top 10% and lower. There are a couple of real sweet spot play on results:

PLAY ON: When a team tallied at least 27 assists (top 20%) last game and committed no more than 5 turnovers (top 1%): 54-29-1 (1.70, 65.1%) ATS.

PLAY ON: When a team tallied at least 31 assists (top 5%) last game and committed no more than 7 turnovers (top 5%): 78-53-4 (1.94, 59.5%) ATS.

HIGH ASSISTS/HIGH TURNOVERS: (p:assists>=22,27,29,31,35 and p:turnovers>=25,21,20,18,14)

We discussed earlier in the article on how this is a spot where a team is likely pushing the tempo and moving the ball the most. This creates a situation where results are a bit more mixed in these games, but are still generally positive. The playable situation here suggests that the most extreme turnover rate is not a big problem going forward it was matched by a high assist rate:

PLAY ON: When teams committed at least 25 turnovers last game (top 1%) and tallied at least 22 assists (top 50%): 110-86-4 (1.75, 56.1%) ATS.

This top 1% turnover situation at least 60% ATS at all of the top 1, 5, 10 and 20% assist rates.

LOW ASSISTS/HIGH TURNOVERS: (p:assists<=21,17,15,13,10 and p:turnovers>=25,21,20,18,14):

This might be the least predictable of the four categories as it has very little to do with a style of play as opposed to a specific style of poor overall play in their last game. As such, this is the least consistent of the four categories, though there has been one situation worth playing:

PLAY AGAINST: When teams committed at least 25 turnovers last game (top 1%) and tallied no more than 21 assists (top 50%): 112-144-0 (0.27, 43.8%) ATS.

This top 1% turnover situation is interesting because it goes the opposite direction of the high turnover, high assist play, showing that the assists really do matter in extremely high turnover games. However, as the assist number moves more to the extreme, this system varies in result unlike with the last play on.

LOW ASSISTS/LOW TURNOVERS: (p:assists<=21,17,15,13,10 and p:turnovers<=13, 10,9,7,5)

This is another category that is likely to be style driven from a team with some combination of slow and/or conservative play and heavy isolation sets. The farther a team works toward the extremes in this situation, the better the ATS result is (suggesting a unique style that may be difficult to match up with or simply undervalued by bettors as it lacks excitement.) The best situation for playing an ATS bet is:

PLAY ON: When teams committed no more than 13 turnovers last game (top 50%) and tallied no more than 10 assists (top 1%): 103-81-3 (2.26, 56.0%) ATS

The results are positive ATS in similar ranges for the assist and turnover results as well.

SUMMARY:

Assists and turnovers are indeed linked and they do have a meaningful impact from one game to the next, much of which is factored into the line and some of which is not, particularly when looking at the two data points simultaneously.

In this study, we revealed five situations where you can potentially take advantage of this with against the spread wagers.

SportsBook Breakers is an expert at system handicapping and it has shown in the quality of its selections. SportsBook Breakers (Vince Akins) had a fantastic 2018-19 NBA season, finishing up +$1,790 for the $100 player. Using 100s of NBA systems, including dozens of newly uncovered systems, SBB is poised for a huge NBA season in 2019-20.

SBB newly uncovered systems in other sports has led to a monster 2019 throughout its handicapping. SBB is the top-ranked MLB handicapper in the country in 2019 (up more than $4,000 for the $100 player) and the #2-ranked handicapper in all sports during 2019.

Early Season NBA Trend: Fading Short Home Favorites

Presented by DatabaseSportsPicks, Twitter: @DatabasePicks

This NBA trend is an early season trend that features games 1-22 in the regular season. It involves home favorites of four points or fewer that lost their last game and have a lower winning percentage than their opponent. The SDQL text is:

```
game number<=22 and HF and p:L and season>=2010 and line>=-4 and WP<o:WP

Since 2010, the record of teams in this spot is:

SU: 94-94 (50%)

ATS: 72-110-6 (39.6%)

This is better than 60% winners over the past nine NBA seasons. In 2018-19, teams that qualified for these conditions were 9-12 straight up and 7-14 ATS, getting outscored by an average of 1.95 ppg.

Since 2010, the average line in these games is about minus 2.5 points and the average final score has the home favorite barely outscoring their opponent with a score of 101.2-100.6. As you can see, it would have would been profitable to take the Underdog on both the moneyline and spread in this spot.

The average moneyline price for an line of minus 2.5 is around minus 140 for the favorite and plus 120 for the underdog.

So, if you bet enough to win \$100 profit on the ML for the underdog in this spot every time since 2010, on average you would be up \$1880. $(94 \times 120) - (94 \times 100) =$ for +18.8 net units.

If you bet enough to win $100 profit on the spread for the underdog every game, with an average Spread line of (-110) you would be up $3080. $(110 \times $100) - (72 \times $110) = $3080$ for +30.8 net units.

That would be a grand total of plus 49.6 units combined if you bet the underdog on the moneyline and spread every game since 2010. This trend has averaged almost 21 plays per year, so keep your eye out for this trend in 2019-20!

2019-20 Back-to-Back Road Games - Playing and Hosting

By The Sports Data Query Group (SDQG)

In this article we will look at the number of games each team is playing their second road games in two days and the number of games in which a team is hosting an opponent that is playing their second road game in two days. The accompanying table provides all the numbers.

The first column simply gives the team name. The second gives the number of times a team is scheduled to play their second road game in two days. The SDQL for this situation is: A and p:A and rest=0. In this column, we can see that the Detroit Pistons only have to play two road games in two days ONCE this season. The Bulls, Grizzlies and 76ers only have two back-to-back road games with no rest. On the other hand, the Clippers have to play EIGHT such games and the Raptors have seven.

Column three gives the number of times a team is hosting an opponent that is playing with no rest and played on the road yesterday. The SDQL here can be H and op:A and o:rest=0. In this column we see that the Bucks, Magic, Pacers, Wizards and Raptors get only ONE opponent that is playing their second road game in two days. The Clippers host ten back-to-backers and the bulls get nine.

The fourth column gives the difference between columns two and three for each team.

The Raptors have the worst differential, as they play seven back-to-back road games but host only one opponent that is playing the second of back to back road games this season.

The Wizards are also saddled with a bad differential, as they play six sets of back-to-back road games in 2019-20, but host only one team playing the second of back-to-back road games.

The best differential is that of the Bulls at plus 7. Chicago plays only two sets of back-to-back road games all season, but they host nine teams that are playing the second of back-to-back road games.

When trying to forecast the number of wins a team will achieve over a regular season, these data should be taken into account.

Why Would Anyone Bet These Guys?!

By Rooktiss

We all know by now that the public tends to overreact. The majority of public betters take a good team to smoke the underdog that hasn't won in a while. I don't blame them. Why would you put your hard earned money on a team that's lost a bunch in a row, probably tanking, laying 15.5 to a Championship contender? NBA we might have a different perspective on that one.

I'm always backing crappy teams in the NBA and I try to explain to my buddies why I consistently take the Suns, Knicks, and Cavs. Why do I torture myself like that!? Holding my nose and hoping for junk time to cover my 15.5.

But it happens every year in the NBA, you have 2 or 3 teams that are so committed to being terrible for a chance at more ping pong balls in next years' Draft that you wonder why Adam Silver hasn't kicked these teams out of the league yet. But what if I told you there's an edge.

Let's start off with a team that has lost at least 8 straight. I know, you're rolling your eyes at me, hang with me here! The SDQL for this is:

streak<=-8

SDQL Trend Mart
the sdql makes the market

We have something here at 53.1%. That's an edge folks. Not a great one, but something brewing. Remember, even though these teams have lost at least 8 straight doesn't mean they are not covering ATS.

Now let's look at site:

streak<=-8 and site

Results say 56.4% for the away team, 50.1% for the home team. WOW! Okay, let's take the away team then, click on "site=away".

500+ game sample and we can hit 56% on an away team that has lost 8 straight games.

I'm going to stop right there. You can spruce this one up all you want but it's simple as it gets right there so be careful how much you do to it, but going forward I will be backing crappy NBA teams and I'm okay with that.

Hint: Check if this works for College Basketball or really any sport for that matter...Good luck this year!

2019-20 Hosting Teams on Long Road Trips

By the Sports Data Query Group (SDQG)

In this article we will look at the number of times each team is hosting a team that is playing in their third-plus road game. The accompanying table provides all the numbers.

The first column simply gives the team name. The second gives the number of times a team is scheduled to host a team playing in at least their third straight road game. The SDQL for this situation is:

H and op:A and opp:A

In this column, we can see, for example, that the Atlanta Hawks are scheduled to host eleven teams this season that will be playing in at least their third straight road game.

The team with the greatest number of opponent's that will be playing in at least their third straight road game is the Portland Trailblazers with 17. They are followed by the Kings and Lakers, each with 16.

On the other end, we have the Charlotte Hornets, which only get four opponents that will be playing in at least their third straight road game. The Bucks and the Timberwolves are close behind with five such opponents.

The third column gives the number of times a team is scheduled to host a team playing in at least their fourth straight road game. The SDQL for this situation is:

H and op:A and opp:A and oppp:A

Leading the way here is the Warriors, which host nine teams playing in at least their fourth straight road game. The Nuggets, Bulls, Jazz and Blazers are close behind with eight.

The Spurs and Pelicans each get a single opponent playing in at least their fourth straight road game in 2019-20.

Finally, in the fifth column we find seven teams that get NO opponents playing in at least their fifth straight road game while the Bulls get five teams playing in at least their fifth straight road game.

This information is useful in projection season win totals.

Using the SDQL to Make Wiser NBA Bets in 2019-20 season

By John Ryan

We are on the doorstep to the start of the 2019-20 NBA season and there is an even greater amount of anticipation from fans given the huge number of player moves and offseason actions. I have been providing professional advice for 25 years and coming off a 24-12 ATS 67% NBA playoffs. So, I am looking forward to providing another money-making campaign in the 2019-20 NBA season and sharing the SDQL situational queries that identify rock solid betting opportunities.

One of the many trends that bettors like to look at are win streaks and losing streaks, but with the power of the #SDQL you can list winning, losing, ATS winning, and ATS losing streaks. For example, by using the following SDQL of:

Min(streak),Max(streak),Min(ats streak),Max(ats streak),R(ats streak) as Current ATS, R(streak) as Current SU@team and season=2018

we can see all 30 NBA teams and their longest winning and losing streaks in each of those categories.

So, the New York Knicks had the longest losing streak in the NBA with 18 consecutive losses. There were five NBA teams (76ers, Hornets, Bucks, Raptors, and Trailblazers), who had the shortest losing streaks and just three games. The Miami Heat had the shortest ATS losing streak at three games while the Nets, Mavericks, and Celtics led the NBA with eight game winning streaks. From this point you can build upon these sets of parameters.

Let's say for example, you wanted to know what the ATS results have been for a team that has covered the spread in seven of their last eight games and now facing an opponent that has lost three or more consecutive games ATS in games played since the start of the 2014 season. Use the SDQL:

tS(ATSW,N=8)>=7 and o:ats streak<=-3 and season>=2014

This is just the tip of the iceberg with SDQL and its power to bring out the best sports data intelligence available and it is only limited by your creativity.

Good Luck this NBA season and will looking for you at the KillerSports.com Trend Mart and the KillerCappers.com web site.

The SDQG NBA Trend Set

The SDQG (Sports Data Query Group) NBA Trend set contains a wealth of past performance indicators that have been uncovered with the Sports Data Query Language (SDQL). The vast majority of these performance indicators are not factored into the line, thus giving the knowledgeable, intelligent handicapper an advantage over the linesmaker.

The value of this trend set comes from the fact that it is updated daily during the season by a team of NBA experts who have learned how to interrogate the database with the SDQL. This will allow the user of this trend set to capitalize on emerging trends in performance before the linesmakers. Here is a sample of one of the ATS trends in the set:

NBA1654: Play ON the Mavericks off a game as a dog when they are at the end of a three-game road trip and it is before the All-Star break.

The SDQL text is:

```
team=Mavericks and p:D and n:site streak=-3 and n:H and BASB and date>=19991227

Here is the records summary it produces:

SU:16-6 (5.23, 72.7%)
ATS:22-0-0 (7.14, 100.0%) avg line: 1.9
O/U:10-12-0 (-3.64, 45.5%) avg total: 200.7

Here is a sample OU indicator.

NBA3728: Play the Bucks UNDER off a win as a road favorite in which they shot over 50% from the field and it is before the All-Star break.

The SDQL text is:

```
team=Bucks and p:WAF and 50<p:FGP and BASB and date>=20030117

Here is the records summary it produces:

SU:15-6 (5.10, 71.4%)
ATS:11-9-1 (0.79, 55.0%) avg line: -4.3
O/U:0-21-0 (-14.02, 0.0%) avg total: 204.5

Milwaukee has 21 straight unders in this spot and both of the last two stayed under by 30-plus points.

Imagine starting your daily NBA handicapping routine with the top performance indicators for every match-up on the card.

You will be able to see the stats summary and average margins and you will be able to view the game listing for any trend, which will allow you to gauge its timeliness.

After all, the trends in past performance are not where the handicapping ends, it is where it begins.

It is only $7 in web debit value a day, $27 for a week, $77 for 30 days and $277 for the season, including playoffs.

Of course, you are welcome to save any of the trends in the SDQG set in your personal trend file.

Each day there will be a sample trend from the SDQG set presented in a one-minute video. The video link will be tweeted out under the twitter handle:
