QUICK SDQL OVERVIEW

SDQL stands for Sports Data Query Language. It is a text language that allows the investigation of past sports results over the internet using your home computer. It is easy, it is fast and it is free. If you can perform a search on Google, you can query the past results of professional sports games.

Like the Google search, there is a text query box in which you enter what you would like to search. Unlike Google, the search has to be specific and you must use the Sports Data Query Language. The advantage of the SDQL is that you get one hit, which is exactly what you asked for – not a billion hits, most of which are not what you are looking for.

For example, if you want to see the results for all road favorites in the NBA since 1995-96 (the start of the database), simply enter: into the query text box and then click on the query button. It is as simple as that! The premier site at which to perform your own queries is:

killersports.com/nba.py/query

To see all the NBA games in which a team shot less than 40% from the field and won the game, enter

FGP < 40 and W

That's it!

The SDQL allows access to billions of situations that are of interest to sports historians, the sports media, fantasy league participants and serious sports bettors.

The ability to quickly and efficiently interrogate historical data in the NBA (as well as the NFL, NHL, MLB and NCAA football and basketball) will provide the SDQL user a terrific advantage over those that just pore over box scores and read other people's interpretations of the results. Perhaps the best way to grasp the SDQL is to simply try the hundreds of examples in the trends section of book using query page.

Basically, there are only a couple of key ideas that will get you well on your way to becoming an SDQL master. The first is that the SDQL is NOT a computer language that requires knowledge of how to program a computer. The SDQL is as simple as it can possibly be. Of course, the SDQL can be a big complex if the situation you want to query is complex.

Basically, a query consists of a number of conditions separated by the word "and." For example,

team = Bucks and A and streak >= 3

This query has three conditions. The first is that the team is the Milwaukee Bucks. The second is that the site is away. That is, they are not playing at home. The third is that they are on a three-plus game winning streak.

There is no limit to the number of SDQL phrases that can be strung together with the word "and."

That's it. This is the basic structure of the SDQL. This structure will allow the thorough interrogation and investigation of historical sports data. Understanding this structure is the key to understanding the SDQL. Once you have a grasp of this structure, you will be able to perform your own investigations.

Start by trying the many examples in this book that can be found on the Team Trends pages. You can also learn about the SDQL by watching the daily videos posted on youtube.com and tweeted out by KillerSports.

If you have any questions about the SDQL, address them to the sportsdatabase.com Google discussion group at:

<http://groups.google.com/group/SportsDataBase>

This group is monitored by numerous SDQL masters who will be able to be able to address all your well-posed questions.

Happy Hunting!

2017-18 Back-to-Back Road Games - Playing and Hosting

In this article we will look at the number of games each team is playing their second road games in two days and the number of games in which a team is hosting an opponent that is playing their second road game in two days. The accompanying table provides all the numbers.

The first column simply gives the team name. The second gives the number of times a team is scheduled to play their second road game in two days. The SDQL for this situation is: A and p:A and rest=0. In this column, we can see that the Hornets and Cavaliers only have to play two road games in two days twice this season. On the other hand, the Clippers have to play ten such games - and they are the only team in the league that has to play double-digit back-to-back road games in 2017-18.

Column three gives the number of times a team is hosting an opponent that is playing with no rest and played on the road yesterday. The SDQL here can be H and op:A and o:rest=0. In this column we see that the Dallas Mavericks are the only team in the league that has hosts NO back-to-back road games all season. This is actually unprecedented in the history of the database. The Previous low was two such games. On the only end, we see that the 76ers have ten such games and that hardly seems fair. It is also worth noting that the Jazz and Suns host nine back-to-backers and the Warriors and Bucks get eight each.

The fourth column gives the difference between columns two and three for each team.

The best differential is that of the 76ers at plus 7. They are followed by the Hornets at plus 6 and the Bucks at plus 5. On the unfortunate end of the table, we find the Blazers and Clippers each of which play five more back-to-backers than they host over the 2017-18 season.

When trying to forecast the number of wins a team will achieve over a regular season, these data should be taken into account.

Team	B2B - Playing	B2B - Hosting	Differential
ATL	5	4	-1
BKN	6	5	-1
BOS	6	3	-3
CHA	2	8	+6

2017-18 Rest vs No Rest Combinations

In this article we will look at the games that feature a “Rest vs No Rest” combination. The table these data for the 2017-18 NBA regular season. The first column gives the team name. The second column give the number of scheduled games in which the team has rest and their opponent has no rest. The second column gives the number of games the team has no rest and their opponent is rested. The fourth column give the differential between column two and column 3. Positive differentials are favorable and negative differentials are unfavorable.

At the top of the Rest vs No Rest scheduling bonanza are five teams (Cleveland, Detroit, Philadelphia, Phoenix, and Sacramento) each of which play 14 games this regular season with rest vs an unrested opponent. On the other end of the spectrum, we have the Hawks and Mavericks, each of which only play five games all season with rest vs an unrested opponent. That is quite a difference from top to bottom.

The range in the third column is much tighter. There are six teams (Dallas, Boston, Charlotte, Houston, Miami and Milwaukee) that play nine games with no rest vs a rested opponent and the Thunder and the Kings are saddled with the highest number in the league in this column with 14 No Rest vs Rest games this season.

The last column gives the difference between columns 2 and 3. The Hawks and the Bulls share the worst differential at minus five and there are six teams this season that have a differential of plus three.

They are: Philadelphia, Cleveland, Orlando, Memphis, Milwaukee, and the LA Lakers.

Of course, there is a lot more analysis needed to determine the difficulty of a team’s schedule, but the rest-vs-no rest combinations are definitely a piece of the puzzle.

Team	Rest vs No Rest	No Rest vs Rest	Differential
ATL	5	10	-5
BKN	10	10	0

The 2017-18 NBA Team Schedules

This section contains a two-page schedule for each NBA team. The teams are in alphabetical order by their team name. The first column on the far left is the date. The second column gives the day of the week. The third column gives the site of the game. The fourth column gives the days' rest combination, with the team's rest first and the opponent's rest second. For example, if the rest combination is 1&0, it means that the team was off yesterday, but played the day before and their opponent played yesterday.

The fifth column gives the name of the opponent. The sixth column gives the name of the opponent's previous opponent. For example, in the Bucks' season opener, we can see that they visit the Celtics on Wednesday October 18th and we can see that Boston is off a game in Cleveland the day before. Then on Friday, the Bucks face the Cavs when the Cavs are off a game at home vs Boston.

The seventh column gives the opponent travel. If the entry is 3rd@A, it means that the opponent is playing in their third straight road game. If it is 1st@H then the opponent is playing either playing their first game of the season at home or they are off a road game.

The remaining columns are left blank with suggested headers.

With the information presented like this, it is easier to spot back-to-back road games, when an opponent is on a long road trip and when they are off a key rivalry game.

Finally, the away rows in a team's schedule are shaded so you can easily spot a team's longest road trip of the season and see how their homestands and road trips are distributed over the team's 82-game schedule.

The goal of the authors of the Killer Sports Schedule/Log is to provide the reader with information at a glance," thus preventing the incessant flipping back and forth through a schedule.

NBA TEAM TRENDS PAGES

There are 420 team trends in the next section – fourteen for each of the thirty NBA teams. Each trend is perfect and ten are of the ATS variety and four are OU trends. The first five trends for each team are Play-ON trends and the second grouping of five trends are Play-AGAINST trends, the next two trends are Play-OVER and the final two are Play-UNDER.

The trends are presented in three columns. The first is the trend ID. This allows the trend to be referenced. For example, MIL001 in Milwaukee's trend number one.

The second column gives the English text of the trend. For example, "The Bucks are 16-0 ATS (+10.34 ppg) at home off a when they are off two losses as a dog, the last of which came on the road, and it is before the All-Star break."

Note that the number in parentheses immediately following the record is the average margin by which a team has covered or failed to cover the spread. Here, the Bucks are 16-0 ATS, covering by an average of 10.34 points per game.

The last column contains the Sports Data Query Language (SDQL) text that can be used to see the updated results for the trend anytime, simply cut the SDQL text from this document and paste it into the query box on-line and click the query button to run the query.

SDQL text boxes are available and SportsDataBase.com, KillerSports.com. No membership or registration is needed and there is currently no charge to run a query. It's similar to Google. If you can Google, you can SDQL.

The trends presented here and not "recommended plays." In the NBA, teams often undergo significant changes in personnel and coaching over the off season. The obvious example this season is Chicago Bulls, as they have lost many key players and one should not expect their performance indicators from last season to continue this season.

To use trends in past performance successfully a handicapper must ask two important questions:

1. Does this trend make handicapping sense?
2. Do the reasons for this past performance still exist?

If the answer to both these questions is "yes," further investigation is warranted. For example, checking out the average margin and the game listing to see how the trend has done THIS season.

With a cursory knowledge of the Sports Data Query Language (SDQL), you will soon be researching situations of your own choosing and hence make the transition from a typical gambler to winning sports investor.

NBA TEAM RECORDS AND STATS PAGES

Along with the Team Trends page for each one of the 30 NBA teams, this section contains a Records and Stats page.

This page includes regular season records and stats over the past seven seasons, from the 2010-11 season through the 2016-17 season.

For example, the Milwaukee Bucks had their highest assists-per-game since 2010 last season, but they had the fewest offensive rebounds since 2010.

There are a tremendous variety of records and stats and the evolution of the team over the years can be seen at-a-glance.

As this stats table was generated with the SDQL, all the parameters contained therein can be queried with the SDQL.

The SDQL is by far the most powerful handicapping tool available for Sports Handicappers. To learn more about the SDQL visit check out the NBA Team trends in this section. With the SDQL text and English text side-by-side, you can cover up the English text and try to figure out the English translation from the SDQL, or you can cover up the SDQL and try to translate the English text into the SDQL.

With a knowledge of the Sports Data Query Language (SDQL), you will soon be researching situations of your own and tweeting them out, perhaps becoming a must-visit twitter account for every sports bettor.

Another way to learn about the SDQL is to watch the daily videos posted by the KillerSports twitter account.
