PICK SIXTY SPORTS WEEKLY TIP:

This week in their home opener the Oakland Raiders take another shot at trying to halt a losing streak that stretches back to Week 12 of the 2013 season. The Silver and Black didn't do many things well last year but they did win three of their first four home games and should bring some Raider pride to this contest. Houston's Week 1 win over the Redskins ended their 14-game skid and with the Texans showing a nice 13-5 SU record as a road fave the past few years, we left the side alone for this one and focused on the total.

In Week 1, the Raiders (158 yards) gained the fewest total yards of offense in the NFL with their opening season loss at New York. Since 1997, games such as this have produced a record of 7 overs and 24 unders (77-percent UNDER), seen with the following text:

SDQL: tA(PY + RY) < 200 and 35 < total <= 40 and season >= 1997

It's a low total for good reason and games from Week 2 show a mark of 2 overs and 15 unders since 1997 including a 1-10 O/U record the past 11 years. The record in non-divisional games since 1993 is perfect (0-10 O/U) and if our road team is coming off a win the chart stands at 3 overs and 15 unders (84-percent).

Houston's offense punted on six of nine possessions last week, fumbled on another and scored just 10 points in a home game. They won't find the sledding much easier in Raiderville and in a game that will likely be played between the 20's, we bought the hook up to 40 and played this one under.

Pick: Take the Texans-Raiders UNDER 40 (-115)

Note: It is not SportsBook Breakers recommendation to make plays based solely on one trend (our selections at killercappers.com don't). Weigh these trends along with other factors accordingly.
