Supporting Teaser-Specific Trends: The Seahawks are 17-0 ATSp6 and at home and vs a non-divisional opponent and when they are playing a team with the same record. The Cardinals are 15-0 ATSp6 and when they are playing a team with the same record.

Three-Team, Ten-Point Teaser Play of the Week

4-Star Baltimore +7, San Diego +17, NY Giants +10

Supporting Teaser-Specific Trends: The Ravens are 33-0 ATSp10 in franchise history as a favorite and when they are at home before two-plus road games. The Chargers are 39-0 ATSp10 as a dog on grass vs a team that had more regular season wins the previous season. The Giants are 29-0 ATSp10 as a dog vs a divisional opponent that had fewer regular season wins the previous season.

Early Season Success...

SportsBook Breakers feels the early season offers great value in the NFL as bookmakers try to settle in on how teams are going to perform this season and this year is no exception as there are several great week one plays. Even without its full set of systems active in week one, analyzing over two dozen key week one systems has led SBB to a 39-26-3 record in the first two weekends of the season the last five years. SBB's Week One Sunday selections will be posted at Killercappers.com Friday.

MTi's Newsletter Side Play

4.5-Star Minnesota -2.5 over TENNESSEE - We think Mike Zimmer is an excellent football coach. He was a defensive coach for the Dallas Cowboys from 1994-2007. He became the defensive coordinator for the Falcons in 2007 and then moved to the Bengals for the 2008 season. In 2009, he was named Assistant Coach of the year. Over the years he interviewed for numerous head coaching jobs, but was not hired until the Viking tabbed him in 2014. The reason he did not get a head coaching position earlier is that he would not kowtow to the brass. If he thought somebody was stupid, they new it.

In his first season with the Vikings, he went 7-9 and last season, he went 11-5 and wrested the NFC North from the Green Bay Packers.

Zimmer is all about discipline and hard work. His players would go to the wall for him. A Zimmer-coached squad simply wins the games they are supposed to win and they are supposed to win this one.

In his head coaching career, Zimmer has NEVER lost to a team that had fewer regular-season wins the previous season. This SDQL:

team = Vikings and PRSW > o:PRSW and season >= 2014

reveals that Minnesota is 9-0 SU and 9-0 ATS in this spot since the start of the 2014 season. They won each of their last four in this spot by double-digits and they were the dog in two of the four.

Beating the Vikings on opening day is a tall order for the Titans. Fitting in nicely here is the fact that Tennessee is 0-7 ATS as a dog vs a team that had more regular season wins the previous season.

We have faith in Zimmer and his players. Lay the small number.

MTi's FORECAST: Minnesota 20 TENNESSEE 6

MTi's Newsletter Totals Play

4-Star San Diego at Kansas City UNDER 44.5 - The Chiefs have no reason to be aggressive here. They are a big favorite and they are at home. Alex Smith will manage the game and try to possess the ball. San Diego is on their defensive front seven, but they have a solid secondary. The Chiefs have an excellent defense, a solid running game and a weak receiving core. We expect them to be running the ball quite a bit. We are on the UNDER.

The Chiefs are 0-12 OU when hosting a team that had at least two fewer wins last regular season and have a regular season win line of at least five. The SDQL text is:

team = Chiefs and H and PRSW >= o:PRSW + 2 and date >= 20111000 and o:RSWL >= 5

Kansas City has scored an average of only 17.1 ppg in these dozen games.

In addition, the Chiefs are 0-7 OU as a TD-plus favorite vs a team with the same record. This was active in week five last season when the 1-3 Chiefs were a 9-point home favorite over the 1-3 Bears. The final score was 18-17 with the OU line at 44.5.

In 2015, the Chiefs held the Chargers to three points in each of their two meetings, winning 33-3 and 10-3. Kansas City should not feel any urgency to put points on the board here. They should feature their defense and wait for the Chargers to make a mistake.

SBB's Top Newsletter Side

4-STAR DALLAS over NY Giants - For years, New York had thrived as a small dog. As a road dog of five points or less, New York was one of the best teams in the league in spot, going 13-7 SU and 14-6 ATS between December 2007 and December 2012. After December 2012, they've gone 1-6-1 ATS. This is not a team that thrives as an underdog any longer. On the road it might be a different story, but we're willing to back Dak and the Cowboys young backfield at home here.

New York struggling in the first two weeks of the season would be nothing new here. The Giants have gotten off to very slow starts in each of the last four years. The Giants are 0-6 ATS (-7.4 ppg) since 2012 in the first two weeks of the season if they are not 6+ point dogs (team=Giants and week<=2 and line<6 and season>=2012).

Dallas is expected to recover in a big way in 2016 from a wildly disappointing 2015. After going an impressive 12-4 in the 2014 regular season, the Cowboys fell all the way to 4-12 in 2015. In week one, teams which won no more than eight games last season after winning at least 11 (including playoffs) the season prior to that are 43-26-1 ATS (week=1 and tps(W)>=11 and tpS(W)<9).

And because that collapse was so unexpected, Dallas ended up being the worst team against the spread in 2015, going 4-11-1 ATS. Teams that let bettors down so badly one year tend to recover. A team in week 1 which covered in no more than 1/3rd of their games last season are 54-32-1 ATS (week=1 and tpA(ATSW)<.34).

The biggest reason for the 2015 collapse for Dallas from a game play point of view was turnovers. The Cowboys committed a league-high 33 turnovers while forcing a league-low 11 turnovers. That kind of outlier turnover performance tends to recover the next year. Teams with turnovers margins of worse than -1.060 per game last in week one the next season are 24-11-1 ATS (week=1 and tpA(TOM)>1.06).

These teams are plenty familiar with each other, and the two yearly matchups have been high-scoring for several years. Each of their last 14 meetings have seen at least 41 points scored, with an average points per game of 55.8. As such it comes as no surprise that the total in this game is the third highest of the week at 49. Home teams in week one in games with a total of at least 46 are 41-26-2 ATS (week=1 and H and total>=46).

SPORTSBOOK BREAKERS PREDICTION: DALLAS by 8

SportsBook Breakers' Newsletter Special

4-STAR BALTIMORE over Buffalo - Tyrod Taylor had a solid first season at the helm of the Bills, but the jury is still out as to how good of a quarterback he is going to be going forward. And even in his strong 2015, Taylor still had a limited skill set, he was just able to make it work for him. The problem we see with that here is that no one knows Taylor and his weaknesses better than his former team with Baltimore. With plenty of time to game plan for this matchup, we expect the Ravens to have a very strong plan intact to exploit those weaknesses.

It is strange to say, but Buffalo was the more successful of these teams in 2015, going 8-8. Baltimore had its worst season since their first year in the city, going 5-11. Teams in week 1 which lost double digit games last season against a team that did not lose double digit games are 94-63-3 ATS (week=1 and tpS(margin<0)>=10 and opS(margin<0)<10).

And just like Dallas in the previous play, and really more so for Baltimore, that 2015 campaign was an outlier and a big change from the year prior. In 2014 they were their normally strong selves, winning 11 games including a first round playoff matchup.

In week one, teams which won no more than eight games last season after winning at least 11 (including playoffs) the season prior to that are 43-26-1 ATS (week=1 and tps(W)>=11 and tpS(W)<9).

For Buffalo, this is an unusual place to be playing as they are unfamiliar having not been here since 2010. The Bills are 0-6 ats since Dec 21, 2014 on the road and vs a non-divisional opponent.

And because of their difference in records last year, the line has been made tight here even with Buffalo being on the road. The Bills are 0-7 ats since Nov 25, 2012 and on the road and when the line is within 3 of pick vs a non-divisional opponent

System Analysis

It is great to be back on the pages of the Killer Sports NFL Report Weekly Newsletter. Each week during the football season we provide a college football system that is active for the upcoming weekend and share it with the readers of the Killer Sports NFL Report.

Hard to believe we are already in the second week of the college football season and it will be hard for it to live up to what we were given in Week One. Looking at this week's matchups there is little chance of that but for us we love the game so any weekend with college football is a good weekend.

This week our research focused on defense where a team played well on that side of the ball but still came up short on the scoreboard. We wanted to know what happened to these teams were they able to rebound or did that loss foretell the future.

In the end it was a very simple set of parameters that produced almost sixty percent winners against the spread with a sample size of 184 games. We queried college football teams coming off a straight up loss in a game in which they allowed twelve or fewer first downs to their opponent. The system has a record of 106-73-5 ATS for 59.2 percent winners.

The qualifying team in this system this week is the Boston College Eagles who lost to the Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets 17 to 14 as a three-point home underdog. In that game the BC defense allowed just twelve first downs to the Paul Johnson coached triple option offense. The triple option offense ran the ball forty-three times for one-hundred and twenty-one yards rushing. Their passing game was just as inept with eight of fifteen completions for a total of one-hundred and nineteen yards passing. The Jackets managed just 240 yards of total offense on 4.1 yards per play.

The Boston College Eagles offense was a lot better with fifteen first downs and one-hundred and seventy-six yards rushing and passing for 352 yards of total offense on 6.5 yards per play. Their defense played well and the offense was able to move the ball so the combination of these factors gives added support to our play on Boston College in their matchup against the Minutemen of Massachusetts this weekend.

With each of the system parameters met this week's Cajun Sports NCAA Football System of the Week calls for a play ON the Boston College Eagles on the road in Massachusetts to take on the Minutemen Saturday afternoon. We hope you all have a great weekend and as always good luck.

SportsBook Breakers' NCAA Spotlight System

SportsBook Breakers has spent significant time focused on NCAA-wide systems and has found over 100 that are winners at well over the 55% required rate for the long-term success. This is one such system active in week two, that SBB will feature in its weekly handicapping.

PLAY AGAINST: Teams in game two of the season which won 8+ games a season ago but lost in week one.

ATS: 137-174-3 (-1.89, 44.1%) since the start of the database in 1980

SQL TEXT: game number=2 and p:L and tpS(W)>=8

The majority of our football systems deal with bettors reacting too strongly to one game of action. However, there are certain times where that one week of action can be a very good indicator. This is one of those spots where early in the season, the sample size of a team matters more than last season or pre-season expectations.

Play against teams in game two of the season which won 8+ games a season ago but lost in week one. They have gone 137-174-3 ATS in database history in these week two contests.

This system looks at teams that were successful a season ago, putting up a solid winning record. However they already put themselves behind the 8-ball with week one loss. They likely put too much pressure on themselves early in the season, knowing that 0-2 would be a truly disastrous start, and fail to meet expectations. Adding to the theory of expectations weighing the team down, is that this system has been worse for teams when they were favored in week one - 47-74-1 ATS.

Week one saw a good deal of tougher than normal matchups and a slew of solid upsets. As such, this system is active 16 times in week one. Run the system at Killersports.com to see all 16 teams and don't be afraid to take advantage.

SportsBook Breakers' NFL Spotlight System

SportsBook Breakers has spent significant time focused on league systems and has found over 100 that are winners at well over the 55% required rate for the long-term success. Each week, SBB will highlight an active league system in the Killersports.com Newsletter and they will be prominently featured in its weekly handicapping:

In week one, Play on teams that lost double digit games last season against teams that did not lose double digit games.

ATS: 94-63-3 (1.92, 59.9%) since the start of the database in 1989

SQL TEXT: week=1 and tpS(margin<0)>=10 and opS(margin<0)<10

Often times people look at a team's performance in the last season and assume that is going to just carry right over to the next season. For some teams it does. But in general what we see with this system is that their previous season struggles are being overvalued by bettors.

Play on teams that lost double digit games last season when facing a team that did not lose double digit games. They have gone 94-63-3 ATS (59.9%) in database history in week one the next season.

The NFL is a league that sees far greater season-to-season turnover among its teams than any other professional sports league. There is nice line value assigned to these previous losing teams as they are on average 4.7 point dogs in week one. And after winning an average of well under five games a season ago, they win outright in week one 42% of the time, the equivalent of a 6.0 win team, a full-game improvement from last season despite playing average or better competition from the past season.

This system has done particularly well the past four seasons, going 25-11-1 ATS.

In week one, this powerful system is active on nine teams this week who went 6-10 or worse in 2015 - San Diego, Cleveland, Tampa Bay, Jacksonville, Baltimore, Miami, Chicago, Tennessee and San Francisco.

Pick Sixty Sports: Tips and Totals

This time of year represents change for so many people across North America. It's back to school for some, the days start getting shorter and of course, football. Having worked my entire adult life in seasonal towns, the change following Labor Day long weekend was always notable by the dramatic fall-off in traffic. Not just on the roads, I'm talking about the golf courses, bike trails and restaurants. And since there was less people, it meant less work, which meant more time to focus on handicapping.

Hopefully some of you had a chance to read the KillerSports.com Football Annual and if not, it's available free at the website right now. There's a feature on page 25 (NFL Notes: Offense and Pass Protection) that I'll be tracking all season and if your looking for picks, more systems or just advice on how to get more out of the SDQL, please don't hesitate to contact me @PickSixtySports.

Here is a system for Week 1 that identifies a set of potential Over/Under plays based on Wednesday's NFL odds.

WEEK 1: INTO THE FRAY

When a team opens as a Week 1 road fav (or 'Pick') it sends a clear message about the kind of off-season bookmakers think the home side has endured. If the road team registered double-digit wins last year, the spread makes a bit more sense but when the visitor had six wins or less the previous year (it's happened 15 times in DBH), we have to expect a close game between two weaker teams.

When you lump the six-or-less and double-digit win teams into one category there is an Over/Under trend in common that has produced 47 winners at a 69-percent rate since 1989. It's "live" four times in 2016 and here's the initial code to get a look at the chart.

SDQL Text: week = 1 and A and (PRSW < 7 or PRSW > 10) and line <= 0

Each of the past two years went 2-1 O/U and since 2011, this angle is only 7-6 O/U but keep in mind some of the kind of high scoring trends we saw in that span. Also remember how things were starting to return to normal in 2015, as NFL players finally adapted to stricter rules for contact.

This code shows a clear image of scoring trends in the NFL since 1989. Note that from 2009 through 2013, average final scores increased each season (the longest streak in database history).

SDQL Text: tA(points + o:points @ REG) @ season,1

When we focus clearly on non-divisional matchups, the overall record for unders improves to 74-percent and five of those seven unders since 2011 disappear. That's right; non-divisional matchups in this system are riding a streak of four consecutive winning seasons (1-5 O/U) and there have been just two losing years since 1989 (1998 and 2011).

SDQL Text: week = 1 and A and (PRSW < 7 or PRSW > 10) and line <= 0 and NDIV

The three non-divisional matchups to consider for an "Under" play in Week 1 are Panthers at Broncos (O/U 41.5), Bengals at Jets (O/U 42) and Vikings at Titans (O/U 41).

WEEK 1 NFL PICK

My posted NFL plays went 10-8-1 (56%) in this space last season and I'll try and pick things up on a winning note with an Over/Under play from Cincinnati at the New York Jets. The Bengals have a new tandem lining up on the outside with Brandon LaFell and AJ Green but yards won't come easy against this tough Jets D. Also remember that Cinci has a new offensive coordinator this year in Ken Zampese.

SDQL Text: week < 5 and H and NDIV and n:DIV and on:DIV

Each of these squads has a divisional game on-deck (Steelers, Bills), and as you'll see with the above code, teams in the first month are a 58-percent bet to stay under the number. In Week 1, the past 10 years has seen 18 such outings and the net results is 5 overs and 13 unders.

SDQL Text: week = 1 and H and NDIV and n:DIV and on:DIV and season > 2005

It's a lower total but keep in mind that the past two seasons, totals of 42 or less have produced a profitable 63-percent outcome for "Under" bettors (70-118-10 O/U). Access that game list with (SDQL: total <= 42 and season > 2013).

For my Week 1 pick, take the Bengals and Jets UNDER 42 points.

That's about it for this week but just remember, the NFL is a long season. It may sound cliché but this truly is a marathon and not a sprint. Good luck with your picks and once again, be sure to contact me with any SDQL or football related questions.

KillerSports.com Trends Mart Going Strong

The KillerSports.com Trends Mart launched the first peer-to-peer trend market in 2015 and is going strong with several SDQL pros. You can buy profitable trends and systems from SDQL masters and pros, several of whom use these SDQL-based trends and systems as a key component to successful betting and handicapping.

Get started at killersports.com/trend\_mart
