USER Submitted: Doug R.: Since 2007, when the total is over 38, away teams which are coming off a home win where they trailed at halftime against a divisional team are 4-28 OU when facing a team with at least one win on the season.

SDQL TEXT: A and p:HW and p:DIV and p:M2<0 and total>38 and o:wins>0 and season>=2007

SBB's NFL O/U OVER TREND:

The Rams are 12-0 OU (7.92 ppg) since September 25, 2005 at home after a game in which they sacked the opposing quarterback at least 4 times.

SDQL TEXT: team=Rams and H and 4<=p:sacks and date>=20050925

SBB's NFL SUPER SYSTEM

Teams coming off a game where the total was at least 49 and the game went under the total by at least 12 points are 32-57-1 OU. Active with Detroit and Baltimore.

SDQL TEXT: p:total>=49 and p:ou margin<-12

SBB's NFL O/U UNDER TREND:

PICK SIXTY SPORTS WEEKLY TIP:

Try as it might, December is yet to curb the high scoring trend of this year's NFL games and the past two weeks our records show a tally of 21 overs and 11 unders. The overall record since Week 13 which includes November (Thanksgiving) and December games is 28-20 O/U (58-percent) and one of the unders was the first meeting between the Carolina Panthers and New Orleans Saints (UN 47). The 34-7 loss brought Carolina's eight-game winning streak to an end but last week vs. New York, the Panthers took a double-digit lead into the half and won 30-20. The game was never really in doubt and this text sets up the situation:

SDQL: H and p:HW and pp:AL and pp:margin <= 10 and ppo:points >= 30 and season >= 2002

The Panthers were quick to remind fans that the 27-point blowout to New Orleans was more a fluke than anything but they still have a lot to prove. This angle has produced a modest 53-38-2 O/U record since realignment but you'll note an upward trend of 9 overs and 4 unders the past two seasons (69-percent OV). In four games this year (3-1 O/U) the three overs have each cleared the bar by double-digits (23.3 avg) and in this rematch we expect both offenses to have some success.

Pick: Take the Saints-Panthers OVER 46 points
