PICK SIXTY SPORTS WEEKLY TIP:

The Oakland Raiders must be feeling pretty good these days about the team's future ability to compete in the tough AFC West. They've got a developing young quarterback in Derek Carr, Latavius Murray has flashed some talent at the running back position and lately the team is proving it can win at home. Road games have been a different story and with 11.6 points per game, the Raiders rank last in the NFL for scoring. Oakland also gives up 27.8 points away from home and simple math reinforces the club's 0-7 SU road record.

Teams who waited until Week 17 to try and nail down that elusive first road win have not had much success, going 2-12 SU and 4-9-1 ATS with 4 overs, 9 unders and a push (SDQL text: week = 17 and A and tS(AW) = 0). It's worth noting that three of the four covers were by teams getting double-digits.

Week 17 hosts with perfect home records are 17-12 ATS but once the point spread goes beyond one score, the record evens out to 6-6 ATS (SDQL Text: week = 17 and H and tS(HL) = 0 and line <= -9).

SDQL Text: week >= 15 and REG and WP < 26 and season >= 2009 and A and total < 50

Poor teams this late in the year have a 7-21 O/U record since 2009 when playing away from home and the games with a total greater than O/U 44 show a mark of 4-4 ATS with 1 over and 7 unders. Denver is motivated to win this game but they have little interest in running up the score. The total on this game is available at 48. We like the dog's chances for a backdoor cover but at that number, our play is on the total.
