PICK SIXTY SPORTS WEEKLY TIP:

Houston returns home from a two-game road trip that was good (1-1 SU/ATS) but could have been a lot better had they beaten the Steelers. The face a Philadelphia Eagles team Sunday who are on the road for a second-straight week but starting to get healthy at the O-line and running back positions. That's not good news for any defense, especially one like the Texans who are giving up 380 yards per game. The Eagles ran 88 plays on offense last week and it was Chip Kelly's first loss and first under in a game where he had 73-plus plays (SDQL: team = Eagles and (rushes + passes) >= 74 and season >= 2013). We don't expect Philly to take their foot off the gas here.

SDQL Text: NDIV and A and line <= 0 and n:day = Monday and n:week = week + 1 and season >= 2005 and o:WP >= 80

The Eagles' second-half stands to be more difficult than the first and they'll need to have the offense firing on all cylinders. Up next is a primetime game against Carolina and we can see with this code that non-divisional road faves are 10-0 O/U before Monday night against any team whose win percentage is .400 or greater. The Texans are 1-16 SU all-time vs. opponents who average 29-plus points and they've allowed seven of the past eight to either meet or exceed the team's quota. Houston's defense and special teams are not capable of keeping Philly in check for an entire game but the offense should be able to keep this game close. The total is currently 48.5 and we strongly suggest buying this game down to '48' at -120.

Pick: Take the Eagles and Texans OVER

Pick Sixty's NFL tear continued last week winning six of eight plays improving its record to 19-7-1 ATS (73-percent) the past three weeks. Visit www.picksixtysports.com for free picks this Sunday!

Note: It is not SportsBook Breakers recommendation to make plays based solely on one trend (our selections at killercappers.com don't). Weigh these trends along with other factors accordingly.
