PICK SIXTY SPORTS WEEKLY TIP:

San Diego managed to remain relevant for another week with their second straight win against a divisional cellar dweller last Sunday but things are about to get real for the Chargers, starting with this week's game against the Baltimore Ravens (-6 and O/U 46). Up next is the Patriots, Broncos, Fortyniners and Chiefs – the toughest remaining Strength of Schedule in the NFL by a country mile. Baltimore is home off an impressive Monday Night Football road win and given the national attention, this setup usually lends itself to overinflated lines on the home fave – a definite STAY AWAY spot for smart money!

Well, it's true; home faves off a Monday road win are just 42-46-4 ATS in database history vs. teams off a home game (SDQL Text: HF and p:AW and p:day = Monday and op:H) but we have a tightener here that's "live" on the Ravens this week.

SDQL Text: HF and p:AW and p:day = Monday and time zone != P and op:H and op:time zone = P p:DIV and n:DIV and t:NB and p:HW and CAD and NDIV and po:points < 17 and 41 < total <= 51 and season >= 1990

In this spot, the home fave's spotlight win has been offset by the fact that our road team is playing three time zones away, often in an early bodyclock start time (1 pm eastern). The record for the home side in this profile is 9-2 SU/ATS and they've covered by just shy of seven points (14-point average straight-up margin of victory). The average line is -7.2 and at -6 we are sneaking in just under the key number. John Harbaugh is 16-0 straight-up and 12-4 ATS as a non-divisional, conference home favorite and he's allowed just 14.5 points in that sample. We'll look for him to add another win to each of those streaks.

Pick: Take the Ravens
